Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from The Danish Islands: Are We Bound in Honor to Pay for Them? But it is broached sometimes, as the reader is about to discover. On the seventh of January, 1865, M. de Geoffroy, the Charge d Affaires of France, gave a large dinner-party at Washington, which was attended by most of the diplomatic, corps, and, among the rest, by General Raasloff, Minister from Denmark. Mr. Seward was also one of the guests. I do not know why it happened, but it did happen, that both the Secretary of State and the Danish Minister arrived at the house of M. de Geoffroy half an hour before dinner was announced, and they found themselves in the drawing-room almost alone. A few days before, when the legations made their New Years call at the Presidential mansion, Mr. Lincoln had singled out the Danish Minister from the rest, had paid him marked attention, and engaged him for a long time in conversation on indifferent subjects. In a European court this would have meant something, but the circumstance does not...
